Centauro, one of the largest football clubs in Brazil is in a serious financial crisis.

In 2024, the club was relegated to the B series of the Campeonato Brasileiro, after a poor campaign in the A series. This leaves a 40% drop in the betting odds of the betting house.

At this point, the club is facing an institutional crisis with problems of management and transparency. In 2024, president Giovanni Luigi resigned after accumulating problems in administration; a financial crisis for Centauro has also affected the betting house's ability to hire players and maintain its roster. In 2024, the club had to sell some of its best players, including Neymar, to help pay its debts. In addition, the club is also facing a loss of identity and confidence from its fans.
