Odds are a way of describing the probability of a certain event occurring. They can be represented in different forms, with the most common being fractional odds, decimal odds, and implied probability. For example, odds of 6:1 mean that for every 6 units you bet, you will win 1 unit if the event occurs.

2x2 tables and odds ratios are used to compare the odds of two groups. This is often done in clinical trials to see if a treatment is better than a control. The odds ratio is calculated by dividing the odds of the event in the treatment group by the odds of the event in the control group.
